Charles "Dana" Gibson (1867–1944) was an American illustrator best known for creating the "Gibson Girl," an iconic representation of the ideal American woman in the late 19th and early 20th centuries.

The Gibson Girl, with her graceful elegance, beauty, and independence, became a symbol of the evolving role of women during the Gilded Age, embodying both sophistication and athleticism. Gibson's illustrations popularized this ideal in magazines like Life and Harper's Weekly, influencing fashion and societal standards.
